2. UNM Policy requires that I respond to you in a quick and timely manner. Generally, I will respond to any message you send me within a 24-hour period. Weekends may take a bit more time (up to ~48 hours).

3. I will be courteous and respectful in my messages to you and expect the same treatment in return. I know that classes can sometimes be stressful, but I am here to support you in any way that I can! UNM Los Alamos provides a handy document on How to Communicate With Your Instructor. If you are worried about reaching out to me, feel free to review this document to help collect your thoughts.

Communication Tools Used in This Course

- Canvas Inbox is the messaging tool in Canvas used to communicate with instructors, an individual student, or a group of students. To use the Inbox, you'll select which course you would like to send a message through and choose the recipient(s) then type your message. Inbox messages can be forwarded to your email, and you can reply directly from your email. Update your Notification Settings so that you are notified immediately when you receive an Inbox message.
- Discussions allow for interactive communication between two or more people in a Canvas Course. They can also be created as an assignment for grading, or simply serve as a forum for topical and current events. If you are participating in a discussion and want to receive notifications, you can subscribe to the discussion.
- Zoom is used for virtual office hours. You can find the link for Zoom office hours in the Contact Information section. If Zoom does not start when you click the link, you may need to download the Zoom software or log into Zoom.
 1. After downloading or logging into Zoom, click the Zoom link and select SSO and sign in with your UNM Email Address.
 2. Follow the browser prompts to launch Zoom on either your desktop or your web browser.
 3. If you join early, that's fine! I will usually start exactly on the hour and begin the Zoom meeting, which will automatically bring you in if you are waiting to join.
